Though an important phenomenon, the emergence of new industries remains understudied. A better understanding will benefit entrepreneurs, strategists, economic development agents and scholars. Recent advances in our understanding of this phenomenon are synthesized to offer propositions to explain how institutional entrepreneurs mobilize collective action to support the emergence of industries.