METHODS OF SURVEY DELIVERY: RESPONSE RATES AND EFFECTIVE METHODS FOR IMPROVEMENT IN TIMES OF TECHNOLOGICAL CHANGE

Active survey researchers were asked about their experiences with varying delivery methods and with the available mechanisms for improving response rates. The most commonly used method for delivery was still the regular mail, while the most effective means for improving response rates was a post-delivery e-mail. Traditional and technology-based survey methods were found to differ in significant ways.